

The Day After “Heritage Protection Initiative”

Site Monitors Project:

Site Monitor Report Al-Adiliah Mosque

January 2016

The mosque is located on the southwest side of the Aleppo citadel, in the heart of the old city. It was called al-Adiliah because of its proximity to the House of Justice (Al Adiliah House).

The mosque was built between 1555-1557, by Mohammed Pasha, during the reign of Suleiman the Magnificent, and was restored in 1923.

The mosque is typically Ottoman in its architectural style and has one cylindrical minaret. The building is square in plan with each side being 15.6 meters long.

The mosque has a rectangular courtyard with two entrances, one from the east and another from the west, and a water basin for ablution in the middle.

Damage caused by an explosive barrel bomb dropped by Syrian regime

Reported by:

Eng. Abdul Rahman Alyehia (Syrian Heritage Centre)

Site Monitors Project Manager

Dr. Amr Al-Azm

